

Potential new smart data scheme to drive innovation and support consumers in the energy market

Smart data scheme could give people greater control over their energy use and help save money on bills.