

Press release: New research to encourage more shoppers to register their household appliances

The Office for Product Safety and Standards (OPSS) is to examine why less than a third of shoppers have registered their large appliances with the manufacturer