

Removal of hereditary peers from Parliament moves a step closer with Second Reading in the House of Commons

The landmark legislation will remove the right of the remaining 92 hereditary peers to sit and vote in the House of Lords and is the largest constitutional reform to the UK Parliament in a quarter of a century