

Scientists to shed light on UK's underground energy technologies

New £31m research facilities will see UK scientists gather critical data on the use of geenergy technologies to help meet energy needs.