

Sharp reduction in government's energy consumption and emissions saves millions for public estate

The latest figures released today in the government's annual State of the Estate report, highlight the significant progress being made to make the public estate more sustainable and efficient.