

Strategic Command leads chemical sensing equipment project

UK Armed Forces will be better protected on the front line with the development of next generation chemical detection capabilities.