

Study raises concerns about harbour seal populations

New research attributing the deaths of several seals in Scotland to attacks by grey seals has raised concerns about the impact that predation could have on seal populations.