

Humans overtake nature as the biggest contributors to landscape evolution

Humans now have a greater effect on shaping the surface of the Earth than natural processes do.

Celebrating a spatial relationship – BGS loan maps as part of the centennial celebrations for Korean Geological Survey

The British Geological Survey (BGS) have provided historical maps and reports on the geology of Korea as part of the centennial celebrations for the foundation of the Korean Institute of Geoscience and Mineral Resources (KIGAM).

Celebrating a spatial relationship – BGS loan maps as part of centennial celebrations for Korean Geological Survey

The British Geological Survey (BGS) have provided historical maps and reports on the geology of Korea as part of the centennial celebrations for the foundation of the Korean Institute of Geoscience and Mineral Resources (KIGAM).

Celebrating a spatial relationship – BGS loan maps as part of centennial celebrations for Korean Geological Survey

The BGS has provided historical maps and reports on the geology of Korea as part of the centennial celebrations for the foundation of the Korean Institute of Geoscience and Mineral Resources (KIGAM).

Seismicity at Preston New Road, October 2018

Since hydraulic fracturing operations started at Preston New Road, near Blackpool, some earthquakes have been detected close to the area of operations. Details of Seismicity at Preston New Road, October 2018.