

Covid-19 Sellafield Ltd supply chain update – 24 March 2020

This update applies to all supply chain employees working under the NAECI and CIJC agreements, except those who are required to attend work to support nuclear safety and security as identified by Sellafield Ltd.

On Monday (23 March), we communicated that project work on the Sellafield site would be paused for 48 hours.

This was to plan changes to work patterns and welfare provisions.

To allow for deeper planning, and taking into account government guidance, this pause has been extended until the end of this week.

Supply chain employees will continue be paid in line with guarantee provisions in existing agreements. This includes the requirement to remain available to work. This situation could change and you may be called into work during this period.

Any travelling workers who are currently in accommodation will be paid accommodation allowance for this week. People who wish to return home may do so, but they may need to provide a receipt so their employer can pay them under the HMRC concession.

If a travelling worker is required to return to work, they will be notified at least 17 hours before they are needed. For example, they would be contacted at 2:00 pm for a 7:00am start the next day. Your employer will contact you if you are needed for this work.

Employees of Mite Civilian Guard Force, One FM Soft Services, and Cavendish Radiometrics should continue to work, as advised on Monday (23 March).

Sellafield Ltd employees who have been working on site this week should continue to do so.

Coronavirus \(COVID-19\): Foreign Secretary's statement on support for British people abroad

Mr Speaker, we have Foreign & Commonwealth Office staff in all our 280 posts in 168 countries and 10 overseas territories. And they are working around the clock to respond to this global pandemic.

What we have done

Over the last 3 days, we have seen 80 countries place restrictions on their borders.

That situation is unprecedented in scale and our over-riding priority now is to assist the thousands of British travellers who need and want to return home. Bearing in mind the hundreds of thousands of UK nationals who may be travelling at any one point in time.

Following last week's decision to advise against all but essential travel globally, last night, I changed our travel advice again because of the rate of new border restrictions.

We strongly advise those British people who are currently travelling abroad but live in the UK to return as soon as possible, where they are still able to because commercial routes are still running.

Where commercial options are limited or prevented by domestic restrictions, we are in close contact with the airlines and local authorities in those countries to overcome those barriers to enable people to return home.

With my ministerial team and indeed across the diplomatic network, we are engaging with numerous governments to keep commercial routes open, particularly in transit hubs.

The Department for Transport is working closely with airlines to ensure travellers can rebook or find alternative routes home.

Update on critical cases

I know honourable members on all sides will have had constituents who have contacted them in relation to particular countries, so can I update on just a few of the countries.

On Peru, I spoke to the Foreign Minister at the weekend, and we have agreed special arrangements for flights to return British nationals later this week.

I spoke to the Singaporean Foreign Minister this morning and we have agreed to work together to help those stranded to get back to the UK, and indeed Peruvian nationals get back to Peru.

Given Singapore's role as a transit hub, this commitment to work with us to enable UK nationals to transit via Singapore is particularly important. Not least for those currently in Australia or New Zealand.

In New Zealand, the High Commission is working with airlines, airports and the New Zealand government to keep flight routes open and reopen some that have closed.

In Australia, the High Commission is doing the same. They have also opened a register of British nationals hoping to return to the UK and are supporting British nationals via phone calls, and walk-in appointments at the Commission, as well as updating social media pages.

Update on consular Assistance

For those trying to get home in other countries, we are providing as much practical advice as is physically possible.

We first of all would advise all travellers to take a look at the Travel Advice online. It is the best and most comprehensive source of information, and it is updated in real time.

If people are in need of urgent assistance, they should call our Embassies and High Commissions. They will be automatically connect to our consular contact centres – the global centres based in Malaga and Ottawa.

We know that there has been considerable pressure, because of the restrictions being placed by countries around the world and the rate at which it is being done with limited or no notice. We have doubled our capacity, we are now doubling it again to deal with the surge in demand.

Mr Speaker we are helping to reduce travel costs by encouraging airlines to have maximum flexibility on changing return tickets. Where people are in real need, our consular teams will work with them to consider their options and, as a last resort, we offer an emergency loan.

International strategy

More broadly, the UK is working alongside our international partners to deliver our international strategy which rests on four key points:

- to provide resilience to the most vulnerable countries
- to pursue a vaccine
- to keep vital trade routes and supply chains for food stuffs, medicines and other things open, and
- to provide reciprocal support for return of our British nationals who otherwise are at risk of being stranded.

These are the right priorities. We are working day and night to keep British people safe at home and abroad.

Coronavirus measures at UKAEA

News story

How working arrangements at the UK Atomic Energy Authority are changing due to the coronavirus.

Culham Science Centre

In line with current guidance from UK Government, the UK Atomic Energy Authority has now resumed work on some key projects, which need to progress to enable UKAEA to meet important deadlines.

Staff working on these projects are following strict UKAEA protocols (adhering to Government advice) to ensure they are safe. All staff who can work from home continue to do so, with UKAEA's remote access systems working well.

UKAEA is continuing to support suppliers so we can ensure service continuity during and after the current COVID-19 outbreak. This will enable all suppliers to be better able to cope with the current crisis; to resume service delivery and fulfil their contractual obligations when the outbreak is over. Please refer to this link and contact UKAEA procurement team for any further advice or assistance: procurement@ukaea.uk.

Please note that, as you would expect in the circumstances, all events on site, including public open evenings and educational tours, are cancelled until further notice. However, we are running a series of online events during the lockdown – please see the Culham Centre for Fusion Energy visits page for details.

We will issue further updates when the situation changes.

Foreign Secretary statement on Guyana – 24 March 2020

The transition of government in Guyana should only take place in line with transparent and democratic principles that lead to credible results.

Any government sworn in on the basis of non-credible results will face strong international condemnation. If the situation continues to deteriorate, this international response will include a range of serious consequences for those concerned.

The UK remains ready, along with its partners, to assist in ensuring a credible process that provides the democratic outcome that the Guyanese people deserve.

Sentence increased for London man who kidnapped and sexually abused eight-year-old boy

A man who kidnapped and sexually abused an eight-year-old boy has had his sentence increased following an intervention by the Solicitor General, Rt Hon Michael Ellis QC MP.

Shane Upton, aged 24, kidnapped the boy from a public park in Southwark in 2019. He proceeded to sexually abuse him, in both the public toilets and outside in the park.

When the boy's mother noticed his absence the police were called. Upon seeing the police, Upton ran away but was quickly apprehended.

On 8 January 2020, Upton was found guilty of sexual assault of a child, causing a child under 13 to engage in sexual activity and kidnap with intent to commit a sexual offence. He was sentenced to 11 years' imprisonment at Inner London Crown Court.

Following a referral to the Court of Appeal by the Solicitor General, the original sentence was found to be unduly lenient and has today been increased to a sentence of 14 years' imprisonment.

After the hearing the Solicitor General said:

"Upton abused the young victim for his own gratification, which will have a long-term impact on the young victim. The original sentence did not reflect the severity of the harm caused. I hope the Court of Appeal's decision today gives some closure to the boy's family."
