

Press release: UK to capitalise on forensic science excellence

A new report by the Government Chief Scientific Adviser sets out how the UK can capitalise on its expertise in forensic science.

Press release: A country more flood resilient

Environment Secretary announces work to identify additional flood protection measures in Cumbria

News story: How will we power the UK in the future?

The Government Chief Scientific Adviser begins a series of public talks exploring how we could power the UK in the future.

Research and analysis: Future of the UK energy system: 2030 and beyond

Report looking at the future evolution of the UK's energy system in the short to medium term.

Speech: All the talents: policy needs social science and humanities' input

From the war on Ebola to climate change strategy, research in a wide range of disciplines is proving invaluable.