

Counting sheep

The Scottish sheep industry needs to process more animals at home and develop markets outside of the European Union in order to meet future challenges, new research has found.

Raising the bar on positive animal welfare

A review of positive animal welfare has found it represents an important evolution from the wider concept of animal welfare.

The sheep of things to come

Research looking at ways of breeding sheep and goats to cope with climate change has found significant variations in how individual animals respond to fluctuating weather conditions.

Implementing a new model of disease surveillance

Following an internal consultation, Scotland's Rural College will progress with the new model of disease surveillance announced in August 2019.

"Proud" students awarded for farm work

Two student farmers at SRUC Aberdeen have been recognised by the Royal

Northern Agricultural Society (RNAS).