

Tech firms pitch in to fight COVID-19

Two companies at the Science Park are contributing to the fight against the COVID-19 epidemic with their new technological innovations to help protect healthcare workers and the public.

News.gov.hk spoke to the CEOs of both companies to find out how their innovations are employed to remotely monitor the health of patients and provide contactless delivery during a time of social distancing.

The story is available at www.news.gov.hk/eng/feature today (December 6) in text and video format.
