

Theresa May's campaign is going to extraordinary efforts to avoid any form of public scrutiny: we've still not even heard from the Prime Minister on the alarming leaks from Brussels – Andrew Gwynne

Andrew Gwynne MP, Labour's National Election Chair, commenting on reports that local reporters were "locked in a room and banned from filming" during Theresa May's visit to Cornwall today, said:

"Theresa May's campaign is going to extraordinary efforts to avoid any form of public scrutiny.

"What is especially worrying is that we've still not even heard from the Prime Minister on the alarming leaks from Brussels, which expose just how reckless her Brexit plans are.

"Rather than hiding away, the Prime Minister needs to come out and explain just what on earth is going on."
