

UK launches International Science Partnership Fund worth £218 million

The UK government launched the International Science Partnerships Fund worth £218 million of Official Development Assistance designed to help unlock potential and foster prosperity.