

5 ways Scotland is moving forward

New figures out today show that since the SNP came to office in 2007, Scotland has moved forward.

Today, more people are in work than ever before, our communities are safer than they've been for decades and more young people are going to university.

What is Labour's position on Brexit?

It's a good question. And it depends on who you ask. In fact, at their Annual Conference Labour chose not to hold a vote on the issue at all.

It's astonishing that we still don't know what Brexit will mean

It's conference season for political parties, which means journalists are traipsing around the UK from one conference centre to another. But the press pack would have been able to enjoy a bit of sun, not to mention good pizza, as they traipsed out to Italy on Friday to see the Prime Minister speak about Brexit.

Young people are our future

Growing up in a working class community in Ayrshire in the 1980s, I was fortunate to be supported by loving parents. I came from a stable home, and was supported in my ambitions to study law at Glasgow Uni – which I was able to do without paying any tuition fees.

But I was also conscious that many other children in communities like mine were badly affected by the policies of Margaret Thatcher's government.

Delivering our plan for Scotland

It has been less than a month since Nicola Sturgeon announced the SNP Scottish Government's plans for the next year but a lot has already been achieved in that short time.

Here's how we're delivering on our plan for Scotland.
