

Statement by Commissioner for Humanitarian Aid and Crisis Management Christos Stylianides on the end of the Ebola outbreak in the Democratic Republic of Congo

The World Health Organisation has today declared the Ebola virus outbreak in the Democratic Republic of Congo to be over. These are welcome news.

Today our thoughts are with the victims and the brave health workers who fought on the frontline against this dangerous virus in the Democratic Republic of Congo.

It is testament to our immediate collective action and cooperation that this outbreak did not turn into an enormous epidemic.

From the very early stages of the outbreak, the European Union was at the forefront of efforts to treat those affected and to contain the virus. The European Union worked hand-in-hand with the World Health Organisation, the Congolese authorities and international aid organisations to take action.

The EU mobilised all the emergency response instruments at our disposal: we supported our humanitarian partners with life-saving interventions, provided logistic support through our humanitarian air service, and deployed experts to the country.

Through our Civil Protection Mechanism, we also provided medical equipment, while our satellite mapping system Copernicus produced maps of the affected areas.

New vaccines, used in DRC against Ebola, were developed with the help of EU research grants. As the EU Ebola Coordinator, I am very pleased that our rapid and strong collective response helped save lives.

As we reflect on the achievement to halt this outbreak, we must continue to remain vigilant and be prepared. Our experience in West Africa in 2015 and DRC this year have shown that there can be no complacency concerning health threats.

Background

When the first Ebola cases were reported in the city of Mbandaka within days of the initial alert in early May 2018, it was clear that this outbreak had an enormous potential risk.

This ninth outbreak of Ebola in the DRC had 53 cases: 38 confirmed and 15 probable. 29 people died and 24 persons recovered. Over 1 700 contacts of potential/suspected Ebola cases were followed for 21 days each, 21 days being the incubation period of the virus. 3 330 people were vaccinated. More than 130 000 travellers were screened at ports, major markets, airports, etc. in the DRC and the affected province of Equateur.

Supporting gender equality on every continent: the EU Bank at European Development Days #SheisWe

- EIB gives the floor at #EDD18 to partners and projects enhancing gender equality and female economic empowerment around the world.
- Senior EIB experts to debate how the new EIB Group Gender Strategy “Protect, Impact, Invest” can move the rights of women and girls to the heart of activities
- Latest figures on development impact of EIB activities outside the EU to be announced.

Partners and project beneficiaries from around the world will join EIB experts and senior representatives this year at the European Development Days (EDD) organised by the European Commission on June 5 and 6, to reflect on how the EU Bank, as the world’s largest multilateral lender, can support the agenda ‘Women and Girls at the Forefront of Sustainable Development: protect, empower, invest’. The EIB delegation will be joining and hosting a series of debates to contribute to the gender balance agenda and explore solutions to further boost economic inclusion and female economic empowerment in development activities.

Last year the EIB group financed EUR 78.2bn of projects, among which EUR 7.9bn were outside the EU with EUR 19bn directed at climate action. With its new Gender Strategy and Action Plan, the EU Bank aims to apply a gender lens to all its activities. The EIB will hold a number of policy sessions and project presentations at its special stand 73 where beneficiaries and experts will be available for interview.

Ahead of the event, Ambroise Fayolle, EIB Vice-President notably in charge of Development, said: “The European Development Days are rightly putting gender at the centre of their debates this year. Tackling the challenges limiting women’s potential is indeed key to boost development and to fight poverty globally. This is also a core European value to which the EIB is committed. But not only this – quite simply supporting female entrepreneurship and promoting the economic empowerment of women is smart economics. I look forward to discussing this fundamental issue with African Heads of States on this occasion”.

EIB Gender Strategy and Action Plan

To improve the impact of its activities on women and girls, in December 2016 the EIB Group adopted a Strategy on Gender Equality and Women’s Economic Empowerment. Titled “Protect, Impact, Invest”, this Strategy and related Action Plan, approved earlier this year, will guide the Group to further contribute to the 2030 Agenda on the whole and, more specifically to the Sustainable Development Goal 5 (SDGs) aiming to “achieve gender equality and empower all women and girls” by 2030.

Equality between women and men is a matter of fundamental values and human rights, enshrined in International Law, the European Union's (EU) treaties and legislation, including that of Member States. Whilst inequality can affect both sexes, evidence shows that women and girls are overwhelmingly more exposed to gender-based discrimination and violence in every part of the world, be it in the domestic, professional, public and/or political sphere. Outside the European Union, gender inequality is often exacerbated by poverty, ingrained social norms, unconscious bias, discriminatory legal frameworks, as well as conflicts and socio-economic fragility. Women and girls have little access to, or control over, productive resources, they suffer unequal education levels, poor labour force participation in quality jobs, financial and digital exclusion, and inadequate maternal and reproductive health.

Such gender inequality can generate significant costs. In Europe, for example, the gender employment gap is equivalent to an overall loss to the economy estimated at around €370 billion, or 2.8% of the EU's annual GDP. According to the McKinsey Global Institute, advancing women's equality could add between USD12-28 trillion to global GDP by 2025.

The EIB outside the EU: Financing with global impact

At the EDDs, the EIB will share the latest impact figures of its financing outside the EU. Last year, the EU Bank signed 100 new projects, with EUR 7.2bn. of lending.

In turn, this supports some EUR 29bn of investment in total, resulting in:

- 17 million women and men will benefit from safer water supply and improved sanitation
- 6 million homes will be supplied with electricity from clean and renewable sources
- 542 000 jobs in micro-enterprises and smaller businesses will be supported via better access to finance, thus enabling the creation of more jobs and the expansion of their outreach especially to women and girls.
