

United Kingdom strengthens food security in Central America through genetic biodiversity

UK project will enable farmers in communities to improve livelihoods and show resilience to climate change by providing access to locally adapted seeds.