

Universities discuss contributing to the human rights cities initiative

Practice shows the importance of the cooperation between cities and universities at different stages of becoming a human rights city. Universities provide legal expertise and information. They are also key actors in developing a culture of rights in the city.

During the webinar, FRA provided an overview of the state of development of the framework of commitments for human rights cities.

This webinar was part of a series of two webinars hosted by the Global Campus, in cooperation with the human rights cities network.
