

Visit to National Grid

I had the pleasure of attending the National Grid graduation day for their interns. Under their theme of "Employability" they give young people a better chance of a future job by good intern programmes. One of this year's intake has been offered a job with National Grid, who are helping the others find jobs or College or work placements elsewhere. Contracting companies of National Grid are encouraged to participate in their Employability programme. The current special school partner is Addington.

I welcome this good scheme to give students a better chance of employment, by concentrating on their many abilities.
