

Work to save rare British moth from extinction in England

The rare dark bordered beauty moth exists at one last known site in England – a military training area near York.