

Xi encourages university students to contribute to strong army

Chinese President Xi Jinping has encouraged eight university students, who joined the army this year, to help the country achieve its goal of building a strong army.

Xi, also general secretary of the Communist Party of China Central Committee and chairman of the Central Military Commission, made the remarks in a reply letter to the students, which was written Saturday and made public Monday.